

Road-Trippin'!

PEAK POINTERS

✓ TOWING & ROADSIDE ASSISTANCE

Before hitting the open road, check your towing coverage. Your insurance carrier may offer upgraded coverage for increased tow mileage and trip interruption coverage among other benefits.

✓ BE SMART ONLINE

It's tempting to post a play-by-play of our vacation on social media, but be careful who sees your posts. Think about tightening up your audience so you aren't advertising to potential criminals that you are gone. Waiting to post pictures after you return is always best.

✓ RENTAL CAR COVERAGE

If you rent a vehicle for your trip, your current coverage will extend to a rental car rented and driven by you. Be aware that the rental car agency can file a claim against your insurance policy for damage they believe was caused by you or while in your care. It's important to have them sign off on pre and post inspections, and be sure they notate even minor existing damage.

If you are driving your own vehicle, consider adding rental car reimbursement coverage, which can provide you with a rental car in the event of an accident after which your vehicle is not drivable, or if your car is stolen.

✓ RV VACATION LIABILITY

Ask us if your carrier offers this coverage, which can provide protection in the event others are hurt in or around your RV or travel trailer.

✓ MONITOR & DISCONNECT

Home monitoring systems linked to smart phones are becoming popular, inexpensive, and also offer peace of mind.

Finally, think about shutting off water valves to unnecessary appliances. Water line breaks and leaks often happen when people are gone and can ruin a great vacation.

Always review your coverage before going on the road. Call us anytime to discuss your options. Other coverages may be available, and limits or exclusions may apply.
